Through It All J Marques, 2016-02-04 Through It All is a story about a young man from a small city in Mississippi, who grew up in a household with a family and in an environment that consisted of abuse—mentally, physically, and emotionally. He was raised in a single-parent home where he experienced sexual abuse and abusive situations that caused him to gain a hunger for success while at the same surviving in an environment trying to not conform to his immediate surroundings while participating and struggling with his sexuality. During most of his adolescent years, he experienced being bullied, degraded, and discouraged regarding his education, talents, and physical actions by his mother, immediate family, and extended family members. Every day he dreamed of one day being famous, exploring his talents, having lucrative career and travel the world. He was forced to drop out of high school to attend an alternative source of education but still was not satisfied. After experiencing even more family drama, jealousy, and other domestic concerns in his surroundings, he began to move and travel to different cities and experience different things. No matter where Marques was, he always kept the great advice his grandmother instilled in him as a child. Marques began to find success and progressed more and more in different ways each time, whether it be knowledge, jobs, lessons he learned from experience or from being taught. After traveling to different cities and states and finding himself back in the same environment, he decided to attend Job Corps on two occasions, completing his education. Afterward, he was offered the opportunity to join the United States Army services where his life changed for the better in many ways with some unfortunate life-changing events. Over the years, he met many people and experienced many situations that had caused him to become the person he is today with the aspirations he has. No matter how many downfalls and challenges Marques has experienced, he maintained and fulfilled many of the things he always dreamed about and continuing to pursue.

A Human Error Approach to Aviation Accident Analysis Douglas A. Wiegmann, Scott A. Shappell, 2017-12-22 Human error is implicated in nearly all aviation accidents, yet most investigation and prevention programs are not designed around any theoretical framework of human error. Appropriate for all levels of expertise, the book provides the knowledge and tools required to conduct a human error analysis of accidents, regardless of operational setting (i.e. military, commercial, or general aviation). The book contains a complete description of the Human Factors Analysis and Classification System (HFACS), which incorporates James Reason's model of latent and active failures as a foundation. Widely disseminated among military and civilian organizations, HFACS encompasses all aspects of human error, including the conditions of operators and elements of supervisory and organizational failure. It attracts a very broad readership. Specifically, the book serves as the main textbook for a course in aviation accident investigation taught by one of the authors at the University of Illinois. This book will also be used in courses designed for military safety officers and flight surgeons in the U.S. Navy, Army and the Canadian Defense Force, who currently utilize the HFACS system during aviation accident investigations. Additionally, the book has been incorporated into the popular workshop on accident analysis and prevention provided by the authors at several professional conferences world-wide. The book is also targeted for students attending Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University which has satellite campuses throughout the world and offers a course in human factors accident investigation for many of its majors. In addition, the book will be incorporated into courses offered by Transportation Safety International and the Southern California Safety Institute. Finally, this book serves as an excellent reference guide for many safety professionals and investigators already in the field.

This publication contains a proposed 20-hour master training schedule which may be adjusted as necessary; a text that may serve as reference material for the FST instructor; and supporting illustrations for the instructors assigned the training task. This publication provides guidance to the commanders, unit leaders, and soldiers for implementing unit field sanitation and preventive medicine (PVNTMED) measures in the field. This publication is written to further aid the commander and his unit leaders in the continuing effort of reducing the disease and nonbattle injury (DNBI) rates during deployments. Strengthening the Military Family Readiness System for a Changing American Society National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine,Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education,Board on Children, Youth, and Families,Committee on the Well-Being of Military Families,2019-10-25 The U.S. military has been continuously engaged in foreign conflicts for over two decades. The strains that these deployments, the associated increases in operational tempo, and the general challenges of military life affect not only service members but also the people who depend on them and who support them as they support the nation – their families. Family members provide support to service members while they serve or when they have difficulties; family problems can interfere with the ability of service members to deploy or remain in theater; and family members are central influences on whether members continue to serve. In addition, rising family diversity and complexity will likely increase the difficulty of creating military policies, programs and practices that adequately support families in the performance of military duties. Strengthening the Military Family Readiness System for a Changing American Society examines the challenges and opportunities facing military families and what is known about effective strategies for supporting and protecting military children and families, as well as lessons to be learned from these experiences. This report offers recommendations regarding what is needed to strengthen the support system for military families.
