Front-of-Package Nutrition Rating Systems and Symbols Institute of Medicine,Food and Nutrition Board,Committee on Examination of Front-of-Package Nutrition Rating Systems and Symbols (Phase II),2012-01-30 During the past decade, tremendous growth has occurred in the use of nutrition symbols and rating systems designed to summarize key nutritional aspects and characteristics of food products. These symbols and the systems that underlie them have become known as front-of-package (FOP) nutrition rating systems and symbols, even though the symbols themselves can be found anywhere on the front of a food package or on a retail shelf tag. Though not regulated and inconsistent in format, content, and criteria, FOP systems and symbols have the potential to provide useful guidance to consumers as well as maximize effectiveness. As a result, Congress directed the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) to undertake a study with the Institute of Medicine (IOM) to examine and provide recommendations regarding FOP nutrition rating systems and symbols. The study was completed in two phases. Phase I focused primarily on the nutrition criteria underlying FOP systems. Phase II builds on the results of Phase I while focusing on aspects related to consumer understanding and behavior related to the development of a standardized FOP system. Front-of-Package Nutrition Rating Systems and Symbols focuses on Phase II of the study. The report addresses the potential benefits of a single, standardized front-label food guidance system regulated by the Food and Drug Administration, assesses which icons are most effective with consumer audiences, and considers the systems/icons that best promote health and how to maximize their use.

Recommended Dietary Allowances National Research Council,Commission on Life Sciences,Food and Nutrition Board,Subcommittee on the Tenth Edition of the Recommended Dietary Allowances,1989-02-01 Since its introduction in 1943 Recommended Dietary Allowances has become the accepted source of nutrient allowances for healthy people. These Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDAs) are used throughout the food and health fields. Additionally, RDAs serve as the basis for the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances, the Food and Drug Administration's standards for nutrition labeling of foods. The 10th Edition includes research results and expert interpretations from years of progress in nutrition research since the previous edition and provides not only RDAs but also Estimated Safe and Adequate Daily Dietary Intakes—provisional values for nutrients where data were insufficient to set an RDA. Organized by nutrient for ready reference, the volume reviews the function of each nutrient in the human body, sources of supply, effects of deficiencies and excessive intakes, relevant study results, and more. The volume concludes with the invaluable Summary Table of Recommended Dietary Allowances, a convenient and practical summary of the recommendations.

Nutrition Labeling Institute of Medicine, Committee on the Nutrition Components of Food Labeling, 1990-02-01 Nutrition Labeling offers a thorough examination of current nutrition labeling practices and recommends ways to make food labeling information consistent with recent dietary recommendations from the U.S. Surgeon General and the National Research Council. The volume proposes implementing a food labeling reform program, addressing such key issues as requiring mandatory nutrition labeling on most packaged foods, expanding nutrition labeling to foods that do not currently provide this information, making federal requirements uniform between agencies, and updating the nutrient content and format of food labels.

Food Labeling Background Papers United States. Food and Drug Administration, United States. Federal Trade Commission. Bureau of Consumer Protection, 1979 Abstract: The issues raised by the Food and Drug Administration, USDA, and the FTC's Bureau of Consumer Protection in reaching joint decisions regarding food labeling are discussed. While no definite enforcement plans were decided upon, it was agreed that all ingredients must be declared on the labels of standardized foods. The agencies suggest further study before ruling on the necessity of requiring such labels on foods sold to restaurants. In addition the quantitative listing of ingredients is encouraged on products. Policies permitting the grouping of products instead of separate listings will be restricted. A simplified format of the label itself is recommended to improve the communication of nutrition information to the consumer. Including information (such as potassium, sugar, fiber and cholesterol content) with the sodium content of a product is also recommended.

Vegetarian Times, 1990-02 To do what no other magazine does: Deliver simple, delicious food, plus expert health and lifestyle information, that's exclusively vegetarian but wrapped in a fresh, stylish mainstream package that's inviting to all. Because while vegetarians are a great, vital, passionate niche, their healthy way of eating and the earth-friendly values it inspires appeals to an increasingly large group of Americans. VT's goal: To embrace both.

What Foods Should Americans Eat? United States. General Accounting Office, 1980 Abstract: Recommendations are presented for meeting the growing need of consumers, the food industry, and government, for better information on the nutritional quality of foods. In a report prepared for Congress and the Secretaries of the USDA and HEW, factors involved in the development of nationally accepted nutrition principles and dietary guidelines are discussed; particular attention is paid to controversial dietary components such as fat, salt, sugar, alcohol, cholesterol, and fiber. The need for complete and up-to-date data on the nutrient composition of foods is examined in light of the increasing complexity of the American food supply, consumer interest in health-promoting foods, and changing American lifestyles. Greater government participation is required to help consumers make food selections and nutrition decisions. Alternatives are suggested to improve food composition methodology, research, and data analysis. It is concluded that better information on the nutritional quality of food will also help the government effectively implement its regulatory and food programs. (nzm).
